

Red Bank, Tennessee Public Parks and Green Spaces

White Oak Park (44.15 acres total; about 16 acres are developed as a park)

This jewel of the Red Bank parks is located off the beaten path, between Ben Miller Parkway and Pine Breeze Road. About 14 acres of open space stair-step down a hillside in 4 leveled terraces.

Amenities include a playground, 2 picnic pavilions, a 2-pen dog park with 2 shade shelters, restrooms, and a paved 3,600-foot walking path.

The remaining 30 acres of this park are undeveloped public green space with steep, kudzu-covered hillsides and woods, with difficult access. White Oak Park was built atop a former landfill site; contaminated effluent continues to seep into settling basins at the bottom end of the park. A 0.85-mile connector trail is in development to connect this park with Stringer's Ridge Park.
